

Alex's Cure

When you participate in Lemonade Days, you support life-changing research for cures to the deadliest childhood cancers.

WEEK 3

The Squeeze

Your source for (lemon) news

Cancer is the leading cause of death by disease in children in the United States. With the support of people like you, Alex's Lemonade Stand Foundation is making breakthroughs in childhood cancer possible! It all started with a little girl named Alex. Founder Alexandra "Alex" Scott fought a form of cancer known as neuroblastoma and set out to help other kids like her. It's because of Alex's vision that we're here today.

A Cure

Thanks to your support, ALSF's grant funding has led to the exciting discovery of a drug that could've cured Alex's cancer. Lorlatinib was developed by ALSF-funded researcher Dr. Yael Mossé and is currently in Children's Oncology Group Phase 3 trial, the final stop before FDA approval. That could mean a new standard of care for children like Alex, the fulfillment of the dream that started her stand.

Alex found her cure.

While this breakthrough is exciting, the fight continues, which means we need your help. Whenever you shop merch or make a donation, you're contributing to this important work.

Take a Stand

Continue to join us as we combat childhood cancer this month. Be sure to snap a picture of your (lemonade) stand and send it our way! Don't forget to provide a little context or a personal connection to ALSF. To submit your snaps and see all the ways to get involved, head to The Lemonade Stand.
